If we look at the world today, we see people doing evil things - terrorist attacks, murders, assaults and so on. Yet the reality is that many of these people will never get brought to justice.

To us, this does not seem right. For we as humans are all born with a sense of justice and we have a conscience - we instinctively know there are things that are right and things that are wrong. But where did this come from?

3

If we look at a bus, we know there was a bus maker, and a car had to have a car designer. Likewise, when we look at the universe, it too had a beginning, therefore it must have had a Creator. That is who God is.

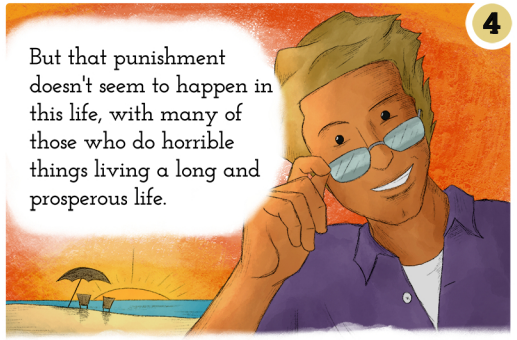

Therefore, since we are created with an inherent sense of justice and with a conscience, our Creator must also care about right and wrong and thus will not let those people who do bad things go unpunished.

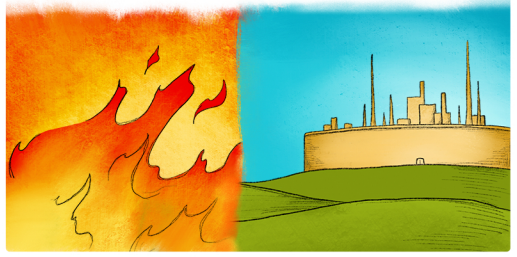

4

But that punishment doesn't seem to happen in this life, with many of those who do horrible things living a long and prosperous life.

It would make sense then that they will be punished after they die. Therefore, there must be a place of punishment (Hell) and a place of no punishment (Heaven).

5

But God being good means that He won't just punish murderers and terrorists, He would even have to punish thieves and liars.

So have you ever lied? Or stolen something, even from your siblings or the Internet? Have you ever swore?

God will even judge our thoughts - Ever hated someone? Or ever looked at someone with lust?

Those standards would make us deserving of hell forever too.

6

Now will improving our life fix our problem?

Imagine you are driving on the road and a police officer pulls you over for speeding and gives you a fine. So you say to yourself, "From now on I will not speed ever again" and you don't. But does that get rid of the fine you have already received?

In the same way in our life, even if we never do anything wrong ever again and just do good, it does not remove the punishment we deserve for the bad things we have already done.

In the speeding fine example, the only way to get rid of the fine is to either pay the fine yourself or have someone willing to pay the fine for you.

So in the same way, either we need to take our own punishment in hell forever, or we need someone who is willing to take our hell punishment for us. Do you know of anyone willing to take it for you?

Who would want to do that?

Plus the person must be perfect.

No one is perfect!

Right, except one Person...

The Creator decided to come to this earth in the person of Jesus, He lived perfectly, and volunteered to take our hell punishment for us when He died on the cross. Jesus proved Himself to be true by coming back to life three days later.

He now gives you a choice to make. Either:

- You reject the amazing sacrifice that Jesus made on the cross and take the punishment you deserve for your sins in hell forever,

OR

- You trust that Jesus took your punishment for you and so be 100% certain that you will go to heaven, causing you to start living your life for Him.

What will you choose today?

After Life

Have you ever thought about what comes after?

Your body might be in the ground but where are you?

I can't say there is nothing because I haven't died yet to find out.
